

ANNE CONNON

LATIN TEACHER

Saint Agatha School

aconnon@cducation.org

PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

---

In her 19th year as an educator, Anne Connon has taught students at the elementary, high school and college levels. She is presently in her third year teaching Latin at St. Agatha and also teaches history as an adjunct professor at Ohio Dominican University. In her role as a historian, Anne is the 2015 Michael Adams Award winner for the best academic article published internationally in the field of Irish Medieval Studies. Connon has published more than 23 articles, chapters and entries in a variety of mediums and she is also a renowned speaker on medieval Irish literature and history. Anne wants to imbue her students with the excitement of learning and at the same time, instill a strong foundation in learning the basics of language while promoting good work habits. For enjoyment, she likes to read and cook. Ms. Connon and her husband, Rick Graff, reside in Upper Arlington along with their two children who also attend St. Agatha School.

EXPERIENCE

---

19 Years in Education

HIGHER EDUCATION INVITED SPEAKER ENGAGEMENTS

---

2018 Harvard/Radcliffe; Norwegian Institute in Rome

2016 University of Notre Dame

2014 University of Glasgow

2013 UCLA

2012 University College Cork, Ireland (also 2009)

2011 National University of Ireland, Galway

2010 University of Nottingham, England

2009 University of Bangor, Wales

EDUCATION

---

Bachelor of Arts, The University of Toronto

Master of Philosophy, University College Dublin

PhD Medieval Studies Candidate, The University of Toronto